

Went to OMJ website
communicating the brand I want to project — premium.

1. Hero Section (Needs a Complete Redesign)

The first thing I see is people holding juice.

I actually don't care about the people.

I want to see:

 Oranges.

Juice.

The machine squeezing fresh oranges.

The juice pouring into the cup.

Imagine opening Apple.com—you see the product immediately.

For OMJ, your product is the fresh juice experience.

Instead of:

Manila's Best Freshly-Squeezed Orange Juice

Use:

Freshly Squeezed. Every Cup. Every Time.

Subheadline:

Made from whole oranges.

No sugar.

No water.

No concentrates.

Then a video autoplaying of the machine squeezing oranges.

2. The Machine is Hidden

This surprised me.

The vending machine is your competitive advantage, yet it only appears near the bottom of the page.

Move it much higher.

Show:

Machine
Oranges inside
Squeezing process
Finished cup

People are fascinated by seeing the process.

3. Too Much Reading

There are large paragraphs.

Most visitors won't read them.

Instead of:

"Our founder traveled around the world..."

Break it down into sections:

Why OMJ

Real oranges.

Nothing artificial.

Freshly squeezed in under a minute.

Short, visual, and easy to scan.

4. Replace Checkmarks with Premium Icons

The green checkmarks look generic.

Instead, use clean icons:

 100% Fresh Oranges

 No Water Added

 No Added Sugar

 Served Fresh

 Ready in Under 60 Seconds

This small change makes the site feel more premium.

5. Show the Product Much More

I only saw one bottle and one cup.

I want:

Cold juice with condensation

Ice

Whole oranges

Close-up of the vibrant juice

Someone enjoying the drink

The product should be the hero.

6. Add a “Find a Machine” Section

This should be prominent.

 Greenhills

 Eastwood

 Uptown

 Paseo

 Parqal

With buttons:

Directions

Open in Maps

7. Remove the “Leave a Reply” Section

This is a blog comment form and doesn't belong on a brand website.

It makes the site look unfinished.

Replace it with:

“Questions?”

Contact Us

8. Franchise Section

Instead of:

Interested to Franchise?

Use:

Own an OMJ Machine

Subheadline:

Join the fastest-growing fresh juice concept in the Philippines.

Button:

Join the Waitlist

If you're not actively franchising yet, this still captures interest without overcommitting.

9. Add Numbers

People trust measurable facts.

Examples:

- 🍊 Over 500,000 oranges squeezed
- 🥤 Thousands of cups served
- 📍 Multiple Metro Manila locations
- ★ 100% fresh juice

Update these as your business grows.

10. End With a Strong CTA

Finish with:

Ready for Real Orange Juice?

Find the nearest OMJ machine today.

[Find a Location]

[Order Online]

The Bigger Opportunity

Because you're also planning Fruitty Dippy, I think OMJ should evolve into a broader fresh fruit brand, not just a vending machine company.

That opens the door to:

- Fresh orange juice
- Chocolate-dipped fruit (Fruitty Dippy)
- Fresh fruit cups

Seasonal fruit offerings
Corporate events and catering

One note: if that's your long-term direction, avoid making the website look like it's only about vending machines. Instead, make it about fresh fruit experiences, with the vending machines being one way customers access the brand.

If I were rebuilding OMJ from scratch today, I'd model the user experience after premium consumer brands like Apple or high-end food and beverage companies: minimal text, exceptional photography, short videos, bold typography, and a clear focus on the product. The goal would be for visitors to immediately think, "I want to try that," within the first five seconds.

Here's the new cup design.

Change to actual machine please?

Not people. Oranges

We don't offer in bottles

1 line only for
No added preservatives

And not "no added
Preservatives"

And

Remove na:

Delivered about the metro

We don't deliver

I remember we discussed removing "order now " na?
